Prenez note que cet article publié en 2012 pourrait contenir des informations qui ne sont plus à jour. Des militants de Québec Solidaire ont été autorisés à constater les bureaux du Parti libéral du Québec, en Montréal, alors que ce dernier s'affirme en train de relayer des informations qui peuvent nuire à la candidature de QS. C'est à Montréal que les militants de QS ont été autorisés mardi matin à effectuer une vérification déclarative lors de la présentation du candidat libéral Suzanne Lagacé, dont ils dénoncent le statut d'allié de Gilles Ducesse. L'équipe d'Alexandre Cloutier, qui a été reçu à l'hôtel de ville, n'a pas exprimé d'opposition au geste des militants de QS qui mènent cette vérification. « C'est eux qui ont le droit d'aller faire ce qu'ils veulent », a tranché Pierre Lessard, conseiller municipal de l'équipe libérale, dans le même rôle que M. Cloutier. Le Parti libéral du Québec s'est présenté comme une alliée du parti de gauche de gauche, mais même cela est critiqué par les militants d'Option nationale, dont l'équipe est de même lieu. Ces militants avaient été informés que l'équipe de la candidate libérale était sur le point de se désister alors que les militants de QS avaient déjà commencé leur vérification déclarative pour obtenir un certificat de candidature. Prudence, histoire de préserver les dossiers Mais le Parti lib

INTRODUCTION ===== Mortality for patients with end-stage renal disease (ESRD) has decreased due to improvements in treatment modalities and comorbid conditions. In particular, the reduction in mortality for the diabetes mellitus patients on hemodialysis has been remarkable, reaching a plateau in the past few years. [R1] The 5-year survival of patients on hemodialysis exceeds 90%. However, bleeding events have increased in recent years. [R2],[R3] Among the patients with ESRD, there are some who have continuous internal bleeding, despite massive transfusion of red blood cells. Prothrombin complex concentrate (PCC), which consists of fresh frozen plasma and coagulation factors, is used as an alternative. A recent report indicated that a large dose of PCC (BiopCC, 5 vials containing 20 U prothrombin and 80 mg factor X) could quickly and effectively control bleeding in some patients with ESRD. [R4] Here, we present 2 patients with idiopathic bleeding in ESRD who were refractory to conventional managements but successfully treated with a high dose of PCC. CASE REPORTS ===== Case 1 ----- A 63-year-old man was diagnosed with ESRD due to diabetic nephropathy. The patient had 4 previous episodes of gastrointestinal bleeding and 1 episode of intracranial bleeding. He was treated with peritoneal dialysis (PD) 3 times a week for 5 months. Because of poor performance and anemia of 6.8 g/dL, he was switched to hemodialysis. On day 10 after switching to hemodialysis e79caf774b wincc comfort v11Clinical chemistry in the emergency department: assessing interpretation of blood samples. Blood gases and urinalysis are, in many cases, ordered after patients have been seen in the emergency department. These panels of tests are usually ordered for a "probable" diagnosis. We studied the clinical significance of blood gases and urinalysis when these panels were ordered for patients who presented with only a CBC. Of 365 patients, those with a normal CBC were more likely to have a normal ABG report than those with an abnormal CBC. The 1% with an abnormal CBC had a significantly higher incidence of an abnormal ABG report than those with a normal CBC (P less than.01). The pattern of abnormal ABG reports was similar in both types of samples. The ABG was abnormal more frequently than the urinalysis in those with a normal CBC (P less than.001). The diagnosis of a urinary tract infection is usually based on the urinalysis alone, but 16.5% of those with a negative urinalysis had an abnormal ABG report. We conclude that in patients with a negative CBC, an ABG is a far more sensitive and specific tool to diagnose any disease process than a urinalysis. We also suggest that the diagnosis of urinary tract infection be based on a combination of the urinalysis and ABG report rather than on the urinalysis alone.Q: Set multiple hosts by regex I need to check a large number of hosts to perform a series of tasks, if the host doesn't meet a certain regex then the code stops. The problem is this regex is very long, so I want to make a list of hosts from a file to avoid having to write it out again every time. I have done this using awk, but it stops after one host is matched: awk -v hosts=/home/word/Desktop/!(.txt)s -v host="$host" '{ if(/^(.)s$host/) { print } else { print "Host doesn't meet regex" } }' hosts.txt I need this to repeat until all of the hosts. A: This is what I use. awk -v hosts=/home/word/Desktop/!(.txt)s -
